

Aircraft Dealer Service

Jetz Aviation specializes in selling new or pre-owned aircraft

The next time you ask Joe the broker what he knows about the aircraft he represents, or how he can help you sell your aircraft, relax and settle in for the sales pitch.

When the pitch is over, ask him, "What are your qualifications?" You may be surprised to learn that a broker doesn't require a license to hang a sign.

Most brokers know limited information about the aircraft they sell – just the spec sheet and photos the owner provides. They will represent just about anything, of course at reduced fees, in order to get your listing. This not only wastes yours and potential purchasers time and money, it most importantly affects the saleable opportunity of your aircraft.

If you want to feel comfortable about selling your aircraft, it's a must to have a representative who is qualified and can answer buyers' questions quickly and confidently.

How are we different?

Integrity, quality and trust. As your agent Jetz Aviation represents your best interests when you decide it's time to sell your aircraft. We've been setting the standard for aviation services since 2003.

You get:

- A presentable 100-point visual assessment check sheet for your listing.
- A review and documentation of your logbook and records.
- A market value determination.
- Details to prepare your aircraft to sell quickly and at the best price.
- A full aircraft pictorial and video.
- Qualified buyers to eliminate wasted time and money.
- If required, arrangements for hangar with boardroom access for private aircraft showings and complete logbook and technical-record review for the purchaser.
- If required, aircraft full detailing.
